Me, Myself and I

Greetings! I'm Christophe. A passionate, dedicated and efficient full-stack developer with 10+ years of experience, designing, developing and implementing applications and solutions using a range of technologies and programming languages. Also I come with a side of design and communication of multimedia along with UI / UX.

Since from a young age I was and still am fascinated with technology, coding and games! That is what got me hooked to this line of work in the first place, I love how certain technologies and features from what we use today are driven by code and if I can, I will take a peek into that code to see how it is made and what each line does to the smallest detail.

I started off my professional experience with database management as an intern in company called NI (National Instruments Corporation) a multinational company with international operation. Which got me so hyped up after doing well in High School and got awarded to travel abroad and have it as my first real work experience eve it was an internship I learned from databases and how to manage them.

After that oppurtunity I kept going in the same direction, involving more Web Development, from backend to frontend learning lots of new stuff, as well extending from known frameworks to full RESTFUL / API integrations.

One thing you should know about me is, I like challenges and solve problems, to learn and study new languages/syntaxes/frameworks/platforms even new standards and keep up with meta, this way I can always improve my stack for development and the next step is to dive into Node and React JS and mobile development!

Also one thing I like to say about coding: “The code is not temperamental”.
